Section C

Why the Food Movement Is Spreading
People Want to Make a Difference in the World

“YES WE CAN”

Photo by How_long_it_takes via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY
First Lady Michelle Obama works with kids from Washington's Bancroft Elementary School to break ground for a White House garden. The White House / Joyce N. Boghosian
System Change – Work Beyond Silos

Photo by Rafael Anderson Gonzales via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC-SA.
Connections to Everything

Photo by Steve Snodgrass via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY.
Food is a “Web” Linking Many Systems Together

Photo by Dan Hendricks via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC.
Food Has Multiple Entry Points

Photo by Jason Alegria via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC-ND.
It Takes Children to Raise a Village
Everyone Eats
Solving Food Issues Solves Other Urban Problems
Food Is Togetherness
Reducing Miles of Driving

Photo by Steve and Sara Emry via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC-SA.
Easing Traffic Jams

Photo by Lynac via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC.
Living Streets: Streetscapes

Photo by Oliver Mallich via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-ND.
Living Streets: Food Is the Anchor of Main Streets

Photo by Bill Rhodes via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC.
Living Streets: Commanding Hubs

Photo by Dominic Alves via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY.
Living Streets: Vendors

Photo by Alexa Clark via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY-NC.
Beautification of the City with Edible Landscaping
Transforming Unused Spaces to Green Space
Urban Garden
Helping Others
Beautification
Food Issues Help Cities Build Resilience

Photo by John Holm via flickr.com. Creative Commons BY.